PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

TICA ANNUAL REPORT 2023

Dear TICA Members,

While our wings may have been clipped over the last few years, this year we have been soaring steadily higher, both as an Association and in the business events industry as a whole. The industry performed quite well in 2023, reaching up to 70 percent of pre-COVID business. This is largely due to the pent-up demand from business event owners and planners, who have facilitated numerous events through which Thailand has greatly benefited. In 2024, we're poised to see this recovery continue at the same rate if not higher, despite economic and geo-political issues around the world. The business events industry in Thailand has benefited from the weakening Baht, and the positive effects of this windfall will continue until the end of the year, making 2024 another good year for the industry.

Nevertheless, the business events sector in Thailand faces numerous impediments, and we must find ways to effectively mitigate these challenges. While extenuating circumstances such as rising airfares and global geopolitical crises will inevitably come and go, the issue of talent shortage in Thailand is one we need to address. Many of our members are already retraining and upskilling, and we need to continue to use these talents to multitask in different areas of the industry. At the same time, we're working with TCEB on developing the academic sector, by collaborating with universities and colleges who are interested in integrating Business Events into their curriculum. These academic institutions are producing promising students, many of whom we hope will join the industry when they graduate. Moreover, TICA's training courses, which we hold 3-4 times a year, offer opportunities for people in the industry to enhance their knowledge and upskill, and this will help to leverage the shortages that we have.

Meanwhile, while rising airfare costs will change depending on demand and supply, and this will in turn affect business events, the industry will adjust by making more economical decisions. Overall, despite these challenges, business events will continue to survive and thrive, as long as we strive to improve business conditions and focus on knowledge sharing.

There continues to be encouraging news for the industry in Thailand, including the government's active contributions to the promotion and advancement of Thailand's business events industry, especially on the exhibitions and mega events side. However, we need to make sure that meetings, incentives, and conventions are also considered important segments of the industry. Focusing on all these aspects of business events will help improve corporate performance, bolster knowledge, and enhance knowledge sharing.

Moreover, the promotion of a prolific amount of major and secondary MICE cities in Thailand offers more options to event planners and prospective clients, who are now able to consider more secondary destinations than ever. Having less-explored options will be an answer to the current trend of business event travellers who wish to learn more about and explore destinations, rather than simply conduct meetings there. If we foster relationships with different local communities in both primary and secondary Business Events destinations, we can make Thailand an even more interesting global destination, with a range of options for business travellers.

Sustainability is also at the forefront of our goals these last few years, and the industry is well aware of its importance. Most of our members are actively allocating resources and implementing strategies to realise our sustainable development objectives, but we can always do more. I would like to find an international platform in which all our members can participate, and leverage and uplift our standards of sustainability development.

After the COVID-19 pandemic and the crisis of the last few years, DMCs and the hospitality industry have learned that we need to be more aware of global events, and that we need to move cautiously. Focus on our strengths and look to diversify into different markets, as this will help when some markets falter – other markets will be there to bolster our strength. This will be instrumental in moving forward.

2024 heralds TICA's 40th anniversary, and I would like to take this opportunity to extend my heartfelt appreciation to the diverse members of TICA, whose unwavering support has been a constant source of strength, particularly during the various hurdles we've encountered over the last few years. I would also like to thank our Board of Directors, Executive Committee, Capabilities Development Committee, Marketing Committee, and Membership & PR Committee, for their unwavering commitment and effort. Their dedication has been instrumental in our achievements, and we owe them a debt of gratitude.

Overall, the business events industry and our Association has moved from strength to strength, adapting to and integrating technology that's developed at an astonishing rate. However, we also need to address the importance of encouraging the new generation and youth to join the industry. This Ruby Anniversary, our plan is to boost the new generation's awareness of the business events industry and its relevance in helping the economy. Through the youth, we hope that we can create champions for change, and look forward to Team Thailand soaring higher than ever in the future.

About the Capabilities Development Committee

The Capabilities Development Committee is responsible for developing training programmes to help elevate the knowledge base and professionalism of the Thai MICE industry. TICA's educational programme receives support from the Thailand Convention & Exhibition Bureau (TCEB)'s MICE Capabilities Development Department.

This committee is responsible for gathering Buyer RFPs (requests for proposals), which are circulated to members in the form of sales leads. The leads are typically generated by TICA's involvement with local associations in organising international and domestic events. The committee also works closely with the Marketing Committee in obtaining sales leads from both local and international buyers, for example corporate executives and trade buyers.
